In consequence of this feeling, it was said, the non-union men are leaving the city in droves. The company had hoped to keep about 250 of them, but it was said that within a week not more than 50 would be left.

There was a serious outbreak of violence on a car manned by non-union men in South Brooklyn, just outside of city, last night. A*crowd of 20 or more men boarded the car. They had pre-viously placed a plank across the track. When the motorman alighted to remove the obstruction the crowd pelted him with eggs and stones and finally chased him half a mile. He was seriously injured, and the mob desisted only when he begred for mercy. The conductor was treated similarly. Then the crowd took possession of the car, broke all the windows, rang up fares on the register and refused to desist when an inspector arrived to take the car to the barns.
